

The Founder

By John Lee Hancock

Michael Keaton delivers one of the most deliciously fun performances of the year in the highly entertaining if somewhat slight drama The Founder, about the man who turned McDonald's into one of the largest companies on the planet.

Keaton plays Ray Kroc, an ambitious if hotheaded entrepreneur who sees opportunity in a local fast food restaurant that truly delivers its food fast, cheap and efficiently. He signs a deal with the two owners (played by Nick Offerman and John Carroll Lynch) to franchise the business, a move that that ultimately pays off handsomely--but not for everyone.
